

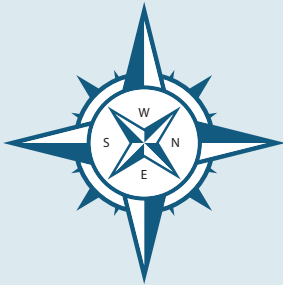

Mapping the Future

The Waterfront Seattle plan calls for public spaces with room for activities such as soccer, ice skating and concerts; a roadway with a dedicated bike path; overlooks and other places to revel in spectacular mountain and water views; and improved corridors that connect the waterfront with the rest of the city. Some parts of the plan are well underway—the Pike Place MarketFront opened in 2017—while the entire 26-block area isn't expected to be completed until 2023.

A NEW TWO-WAY PROTECTED BIKE LANE WILL RUN FROM S KING STREET TO PIER 62

THE HABITAT BEACH NEAR PIONEER SQUARE WILL MAKE ELLIOTT BAY ACCESSIBLE. THE WIDE EXPANSE OF ALASKAN WAY IS IN THE FOREGROUND

BAY STEPS AT OVERLOOK WALK WHICH WILL CONNECT THE WATERFRONT AND PIKE PLACE MARKET

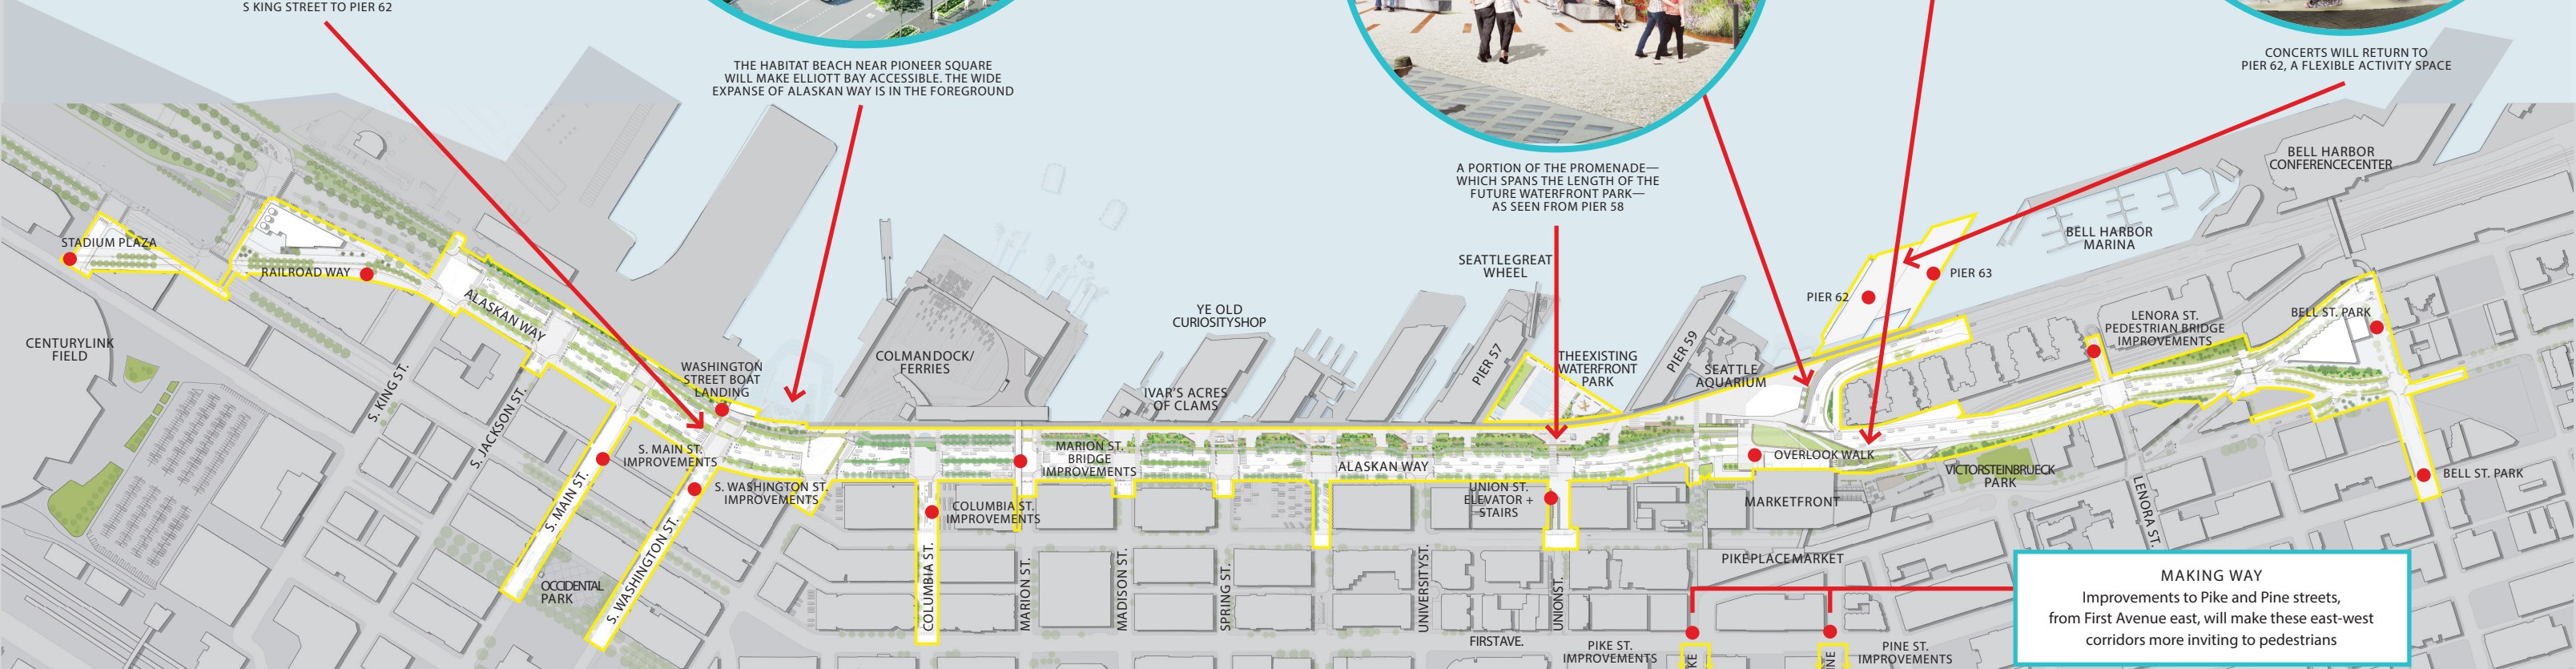

BLUFF WALK SLIDES, PART OF THE OVERLOOK WALK

A PORTION OF THE PROMENADE—WHICH SPANS THE LENGTH OF THE FUTURE WATERFRONT PARK—AS SEEN FROM PIER 58

CONCERTS WILL RETURN TO PIER 62, A FLEXIBLE ACTIVITY SPACE

MAKING WAY
Improvements to Pike and Pine streets, from First Avenue east, will make these east-west corridors more inviting to pedestrians
